Holiday giving part of company's year-long community service program

FORT WORTH, TX – January 6, 2010 – At Bluff Manufacturing, Inc., supporting a holiday charity is an annual tradition. For the ninth consecutive year, the company and its employees gave to those less fortunate in the community. This past December, Bluff Manufacturing donated to Toys for Tots, an organization founded by the U.S. Marine Corps that collects and delivers new toys to children for Christmas.

“Supporting the local community is part of our culture and embraced by the entire organization,” stated Clark Smith, president of Bluff Manufacturing. “We realize the holidays were tough for many families this year and we hope our contribution made a difference for many children.”

Supporting a holiday charity is only one part of Bluff Manufacturing's community service program which encompasses a variety of organizations and activities throughout the year, including the American Cancer Society, YMCA, community resource centers, night shelters and the United Way.

According to Smith, employee contributions to the United Way increased 100 percent from 2008 to 2009, which he attributes to a desire to make a difference.

“Our employees are committed to building products that improve work flow as well as participating in community outreach,” Smith said.
